

Sociology of labour markets - dr Dominika Polkowska

Course duration: one semester

Number of ECTS credits: 4.0

The sociology of labour markets is a large and diverse field reflecting the varied connotations of the concept of a “labour market” itself. The course is about how people get jobs (or not) and employers get workers (or not). The analysis of labour markets is an important concern for sociological inquiry; it permits an understanding of the way macro forces associated with the economy of a society and elements of social structure impinge on the microrelations between employers and workers in determining various forms of inequality.
