Staszic Palace

72 Nowy Świat

The history of the Staszic Palace dates to 1620. In 1818 the building was purchased by Stanisław Staszic, a leader of the Polish Enlightenment, who ordered its renovation in a neoclassical style. Afterwards Staszic transferred the building to the Society of Friends of Science, the first Polish scientific organization.

The Staszic Palace is now the headquarters of the Polish Academy of Sciences, which includes, inter alia, the Institute of Philosophy and Sociology. The palace also houses the headquarters of other scientific institutions, such as the Polish Phenomenological Association.

The International Network for Philosophy & Psychiatry

International Network for Philosophy and Psychiatry provides a collaborative research and education forum to support organisations and individuals involved in conceptual and ethical work in psychiatry and related disciplines. INPP is a registered international charity (Charity Commission no. 1101747).

Aims of the Network:

- To support educational, research, policy and service initiatives in mental health that are based on valuing individual and cultural differences and respecting diversity
- To contribute to such initiatives through rigorous philosophical and cross-disciplinary work on the concepts guiding mental health practice
- To facilitate collaborative learning through exchange of ideas, experience, knowledge and skills
- To work with national, local and subject-based organisations with appropriate aims, in developing and strengthening their unique identities

Key Activities:

Publishing: INPP has its own book series: International Perspectives in Philosophy and Psychiatry, published by Oxford University Press. The cross-disciplinary field of philosophy and psychiatry is also well served by the journal PPP: Philosophy, Psychiatry & Psychology published by Johns Hopkins University Press.

Meetings: INPP functions to coordinate international meetings. Such meetings are planned and promoted by the Network by mutual agreement between the members, playing a facilitative rather than executive role. As well as promoting its own core meetings, the Network promotes and supports other relevant conferences.

Education: INPP provides a forum for the exchange of ideas, initiatives and experience of teaching and learning in the cross-disciplinary field of philosophy and mental health. This includes the exchange of information about courses and seminars, and access to educational resources including literature databases.

Research: INPP functions to provide a resource of information and contacts for people working in and coming into the cross-disciplinary field.

Open Seminars on Philosophy and Psychiatry Foundation

The Open Seminars on Philosophy and Psychiatry Foundation was officially registered as a non-profit organisation in the middle of the 2018, but as an informal group operated since April 2015, when the first conference from the Open Seminars on Philosophy and Psychiatry series was arranged. Since that time we hosted seven conferences and organized many discussion meetings, lectures, panels and workshops in Poland, gathering about 100 speakers and over 1000 participants. We operate in Warsaw and Lublin.

Our main aim is to integrate the research community in the humanities / social sciences, psychiatrists, therapists, people with mental issues experiences and all citizens in order to make a change in social awareness toward more open, reflexive and inclusive direction. We are convinced that the mental health problems concern all of us and are not just private, but social and global issues, and can not be solved without ethical and philosophical reflection.

Among others, we are the partner of The Mental Health Congress that strives for implementation of the National Mental Health Protection Program (NPOZP) in Poland, a regular partner and co-organizer of PsychoCinema series (Lublin, 2015-) and the main partner of nationwide Polish project of Standards of the Mental Health. We also initiated the theater group „Crisis” run by people with mental issues. We also provide charity help for Children and Adolescent Department, psychiatric hospital ward in Lublin (Abramowice).
