

University of Maria Curie-Skłodowska
Faculty of History and Archeology
History Institute
Department of History of the 16-19th centuries and Eastern Europe
MA Artur Borzęcki

Krasnystaw district in the years 1918-1939. A study in the history of a territorial community

Research Abstract

The PhD thesis is an attempt to develop a monograph of Krasnystaw county in the years 1918-1939. I have tried to do this by providing the image of the society (territorial collectivity), events and ongoing changes in the studied district between 1918 and 1939. Where it has been possible to reach the available sources, historical, social and economic processes are presented on the background of changes taking place in the province of Lublin, in particular, in relation to the neighbouring districts. The results have been presented in seven chapters. They are arranged in a chronological-work problem.

The first chapter is the opening balance, showing the state of the County after World War I. In the following parts of the work, the functioning of civil authorities, the political and economic situation, the functioning of health and social care have been shown. The end of the dissertation focuses on issues related to the educational and socio-cultural activities of the inhabitants, as well as religious life.

Despite the fact that during the interwar period, a number of social, political and economic changes took place in the Krasnystaw district, it has retained its agricultural character.

The main driving force behind this doctoral thesis was interest in local history of the region.

Artur Borzęcki

26.07.2023