Description	The course covers knowledge in the area of using of economic and social indicators as a tool of an economic research. The course aims to broaden students' thinking and cognitive horizons, provide a better understanding of the essence of socio-economic processes using the statistical and analytical tool of economic and social indicators. Studying the indicators is accompanied by learning economic, social and political processes and phenomena that are described by them. The course is intended to teach a conscious, critical attitude towards the information obtained and to create the ability to reliably assess the content of a wide range of sources: research publications, reports, expert opinions, governmental and party programs, articles in the press, etc. It also provides the basic skills for acquiring information, constructing and using indicators in the future professional activity of students. The classes include lectures and practical exercises and are conducted in a way that is comprehensible to students with different levels of knowledge of economic and social issues.
